FASHIONS FOR FEBRUARY.

New Year's Day Treated with Extinction—Past and Present Etiquette—Young Ladies at Home and in Society—Toilettes.

As the season wanes, great public balls begin to take the place of the private receptions and entertainments which have occupied the day and part of the nights since winter commenced. There are certain balls for benevolent purposes, with an extended list of lady patronesses, which it is permitted people of society to attend; and, though the grand dames do not themselves make their appearance in their freshest toilettes, and vast numbers of people buy tickets, or hire boxes at high rates for the purpose of patronizing the great ladies, and getting a nod, bow or smile in return. Some one says that institutions were invented to get rid of poor relations. Certainly the benevolent institutions of New York are largely used as a means of getting "into society." Now rich women will, or the wives of rich men will pay a large sum to see their names in the list with Mrs. Jonathan Blue-blood, or Mrs. David Sour-Kraut. It is something to meet them on Committees, or at cozy assemblages of the managerial force, or the directory, even if they are never invited to their houses, and all the same, the children obtain the entree into the sacred circle, if their parents do not.

The great charity ball is, however, very fine as a spectacle. The lady managers are part of the show—part of what people pay their ten dollars per ticket to see, and they know it; and of late years have accepted the situation, to the extent of forming in line, and opening the festivity with a march in procession around the floor of the Academy of Music. They are always accompanied by very high-bred young daughters and nieces, who remain in the seclusion of boxes with male friends, until the proper time arrives, and then descend to the floor, perform languidly the proper number of duly dances, and retire again to their boxes, to examine and criticise, through their opera-glasses, the over-dressed crowd who have come to puff and pant and surge and swell, and drag after them enormously long trains, for their amusement.

A FANCY DRESS BALL AND AN OLD-FASHIONED PARTY.

Few fancy dress balls have taken place this season, but there is rumor of one on a grand scale, to be given by a lady, who has a magnificent house for the purpose, which will probably be considered one of the events of this somewhat slow and sober winter. To this house a large conservatory and music room are attached, the latter really a grand saloon, with parqueterie floor and dome-like ceiling, which, upon occasion, does duty as a spacious ball room. The saloon communicates with the supper room by a wide circular hall way, in the middle of which is a fountain, and the sides of which are to be lined with banks and stands of flowers. The mansion is in fact two houses turned into one, with an interior adapted to to the largest social requirements.

Among the dresses which it is decided must figure on the occasion, the following are worth mentioning:

Twilight—composed of graduated shades of gray tarlatana with flounces to the waist. Across the body a scarf of the darkest shade, fastened on the shoulder with a black bat. A light gray veil upon the head over the flowing hair, studded with moths and other insects. A wand in the hand with a black top and an owl perched upon it.

Forget-me-not—consists of white tulle over blue crepe trimmed with garlands of the pretty flowers. A wreath is also worn upon the head and a bunch carried in the hand. If a good gas-light blue is selected the effect of this dress is charming; otherwise it fails.

Ceres—A rather tall, slender brunette has chosen the dress of Ceres. It is made of soft, fine, mull muslin, skirt and low tunic bordered with gold, and the latter held in with a gold band at the waist. The hair is arranged in a simple Grecian knot, a few ringlets only being allowed to fall in the neck. A wreath of golden wheat, the ears arranged like the leaves of a Norma wreath, is worn upon the head, and a small golden sickle carried in the hand.

The Charlotte Corday dress is trying in its severe plainness, yet a charming young girl has determined to wear it. A short white dress with a slant skirt, trimmed around the bottom with one gathered flounce; a plain fichu of muslin over the neck (or crossed over the bodice) but folded down to the low waist and tied behind; a cap of white muslin like that which goes by her name, having a large, full, round crown, bordered with lace, and a broad green ribbon which falls in loops and ends at the back. Charlotte Corday is said to have been a dazzlingly fair blonde.

Two of the dresses which will appear were very much admired at a masquarade given last year. One of these is "Bo-peep," the other the "Hay-maker." Both require that the wearers should be young and pretty. The first consists of a bright blue silk skirt (short), trimmed with black velvet. A black velvet pointed boddice laced with red ribbon over a white waist. A short scarlet cloak with hood; black high-heeled shoes with buckles. A shepherdess hat of straw, trimmed with field flowers, and crook mounted with bunches of parti-colored ribbon. The Haymaker wears a short skirt of buff linen; a white linen chemise with short puffed sleeves; black velvet braced with straps across front and back; an apron of white linen trimmed with white velvet; and a wide hat of coarse white straw, trimmed with black velvet ribbons, studded in front with daisies. All these dresses are very simple and easily arranged. Another, Marie Antoinette at Trianon is more elaborate. It consists of a pale yellow silk, trimmed with white plaited muslin flounces. Over the skirt is worn a yellow silk polonaise, cut high in the back, low in the front, and with undique sleeves, bordered with deep ruffles of Valenciennes lace, and looped up at the sides with lace and tea roses. Above the boddice, which is very low in front, there is a small gauze chemisette tied with black velvet, bunch of tea roses on one side. Powdered hair and turquoise and diamond ornaments accompany this toilette.

POP CORN AND KISSING PARTY.

Another item of interest has been created by the announcement, from a source unpublished source, of an old-fashioned entertainment—according to the invitations "a pop-corn and kissing party"—to which "over-skirts" will not be admitted, and to which "bib-aprons" will be required. It is understood that all the arrangements are to be in strictest accordance with these provisions. A colored fiddler is to furnish the music. All the old games are being hunted up, and are to be revived under the auspices of a well known philosopher and scientist; and the refreshments are to consist exclusively of crullers, doughnuts, mince pies, and all those horribles of indigestibles which come under the head of "good old-fashioned fare." Whether the belles and beaux of the period have strength and vivacity enough left to enable them to bear up under the peolonged infliction of "blind man's buff," "Copenhagen," "Spanish dance," "twirl the wrynecket," and "hunt the slipper," is a grave reason to doubt. But should they prove equal to the occasion, it will undoubtedly be a memorable one.

AN OLD CUSTOM ENDANGERED.

The old Knickerbocker custom of calling upon New Year's Day has survived all the attacks hitherto made upon it—the vicissitudes of the war, the changes of fashion, and the difficulties of housekeeping—but it seems likely to succumb at last to the inevitable Patrick, bravely as it fought the intractable Bridget. For the past few years calls have not been confined to the parlor, but have extended to the kitchen. The "gentlemen" employed by the butcher, the grocer, the milk-man and the baker to carry their baskets and distribute their wares, must astonishing cravats, and call upon all the "ladies" they have become acquainted with in the course of their rounds, or have exchanged greetings with upon even terms. The consequences to the female employers with their attendants are sometimes annoying. The ladies down stairs must be dressed up, and attend to their duties, which are naturally more onerous than usual, carelessly and gaudily. Moreover, they must have refreshments for their callers, and though in this matter they are sometimes assisted by a surreptitious bottle of whisky, cordials and Bologna sausages, which of course are paid for by their employers, yet the mistress of the house not infrequently finds that large amounts of coffee, cake, sandwiches and fruit have disappeared, and are not to be accounted for. All this is perplexing. The question is, are these privileges a part of our common humanity? If so, are we to share them or give them up to our servants? I consider it a good subject for a debating society. But whatever the conclusion is, the result socially will be all the same—the kitchen department will win.

THE ETIQUETTE OF NEW YEAR'S DAY.

The etiquette of New Year's Day has changed somewhat of late years. Formerly it was considered incumbent upon ladies themselves to wait upon their guests, hand them refreshments, and servants were only needed to remove dishes which had been used, wash and replace them. The advance in luxury, and what is called refinement, has changed all this. The elaborate dressing of modern times will not admit of any exertion on the part of the wearers—only studied and graceful motions and attitudes are admissible. With a corps of servants, the lady of the house will not run the risk of soiling, and it is not good style to set an overflowing table, or urge guests against their will. There is something good in this, and something not good. The heartiness of welcome is gone. The beautiful cordiality, expressed in serving guests with their own hands, is gone; and with more cost and more elegance, we have less real hospitality.

YOUNG LADIES IN THE HOME.

When there are young ladies at home, it is especially delightful to see them busied at all times in performing necessary services for visitors and friends. I recall two homes in New York where the wealth of the occupant does uniformly less than the charming grace of the daughters of the house render a stay in either, be it long or short, something to be remembered. No servant ever bestows these personal attentions upon a guest, which, slight though they may be, serve to stamp the manner of the doing upon the heart of the recipient. This is one of the uses to which girls can put themselves, which, trivial though it seems, is worthy their attention.

YOUNG LADIES' TOILETTES.

The effect of a toilette this season depends infinitely more upon its arrangement than upon the material of which it is composed. If it is very much bunched up, or very much spread out, or very much mixed in material and color, cost cannot save it from condemnation. Young ladies especially effect the restricted style. They wear a tournaure, of course, but it is small, made flat on the hips, and made long, so that the skirts trail off from it to the ground without forming that enlarged lump on the back which has so singular an appearance looked at from the abstract and general, rather than from the concrete and individual point of view. Nearly all traces of Dolly Varden have disappeared. If stripes are worn, they are very narrow. And figured silks are confined to dowagers, or at least to married ladies who are no longer anxious to appear young. Muslin plaitings as garniture, and white muslin overskirts are passe. The evening and dinner toilettes of the "nice girls" of New York are composed of paler tinted silks, soft and rich satin de leon, or poult de soie, trimmed with white lace or Spanish lace and lace upon the low, small basque or pointed waist, and sash, which is usually dropped low upon the back or sides of the skirt, sometimes making a very moderate panier. Overskirts are abandoned, unless formed by polonaise, but the center length of the front is sometimes formed by flat side pleatings, partly covered by a little apron of crepe or guipure, and fastened at the back, under the basque or sash ends. When made of guipure they are bordered with lace, headed with fringe tucking of silk. When of crepe, fringe may be the garniture, with a silk heading. Skirts are cut demi-train, and the majority are destitute of trimming. Except such as have been discarded, more low boddices are worn this season than have ever been indulged in before by unmarried ladies in New York society. Time was when "nice" girls would not wear a low-necked dress, and considered themselves "dressed for a party" in a cashmere cut high, with lace ruffles at the neck and wrists. But that was when Irving Place and Union Square were tolerably fashionable localities. Now the elder girls—and there are many verging upon thirty or thereabouts—have their evening dresses cut below the shoulder blades at the back, and to a mere point in front; with the apparently benevolent intention of allowing the men who have not come up to the marrying figure the privilege of seeing whatever is to be seen for nothing. "European styles," "French fashions," get the credit of all this, when, in reality, nothing can be farther from European practice. French girls hardly appear in society at all until after they are married, and though it is doubtful if this seclusion is any more in the interests of morality than the latitude allowed to American girls, yet one would prefer to see the freedom tempered as of old with natural modesty and reserve.

HOUSE JACKETS.

Jackets have re-established themselves so firmly in popular favor that they will be likely to find a tolerably long lease of life. They are convenient and useful, and that, after all, goes a long way even in fashion. The sleeveless house jackets are particularly worthy of commendation, because the design, as at present worn, is pretty, becoming and adapted to the purpose. The favorite style is a plain, high body, cut in small basque points at the back and front. It is absolutely destitute of trimming, unless the piping at the edge is called so, and when made in velvet forms a handsome addition to a plain sleeved dress of dark silk or cashmere. The plainness, in addition to the rich material, it must be understood, gives them their distinction. Polished with fringe or lace, they look as if any garniture at all is required or permitted. It is a simple line above the edge of silk and jet embroidery on narrow galloons stitched on flat, but this last only upon cloth. The penchant for jackets may invest jacket suits with a little of the interest they had begun to loose. Polonaise is by no means set aside, and the fact that it is now made on fine yak and even Chantilly lace, is sufficient proof that it is considered an institution for the present at least. The black lace Polonaise, by the way, is charming over a peaked coat, sleeved, demi-trained silk dress of a fade or camee tint. It is an excellent investment for a bride, because it can be put to so many uses.

CHARMING INDOOR TOILETTES

are made of light gray serge, casimere and alpacca, with plain tunic or sleveless jacket of blue all-wool empress cloth, delaine or poult de evie. No fringe or hanging trimming is used upon the jackets or overdresses. The edge is plainly finished with a piping of silk and the skirt is amply caught up on one side only with straps from which is suspended a square pocket—or with one of the pretty leather contrivances for holding keys, scissors, and the like, put these for ornament, not for use—unless, indeed, the wearers are as skilful and industrious as the daughter of a wealthy man, who was found recently busily employed in making over a bonnet. "What makes you do that?" inquired the caller. "Is it not done well?" asked the young lady holding up a very pretty and stylish chapeau. "Yes, it is certainly very handsome," admitted the friend, "but I would rather go without bonnets than bother my head making them over, especially if my father were as rich as yours." "I don't see," rejoined the sensible girl, why I should deprive myself of a pleasure because my father is rich. I like to do it and the money I save I have a use for. Besides, my father may not always be rich, or I might marry a poor man, and then it will be necessary for me to make my own bonnets. So you see it is not wholly a caprice. There is reason behind it."

ATLANTA:

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1873.

FOR CONGRESS,

FROM THE EIGHTH DISTRICT,

Hon. A. H. STEPHENS.

Our Fashion Letter.

We had it set up for yesterday's paper, but it was crowded out. The ladies will find it exceedingly interesting.

Our Special Dispatches.

We call the attention of our readers to our special dispatches from Washington. THE CONSTITUTION is now the only paper in Atlanta favoring the people with them—in fact, we believe it is the only paper in the State. The expense is considerable, but that matters nothing, when the readers of THE CONSTITUTION are to be advantaged and favored over those of any other journals.

A Good Bill.

"Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Georgia, That the Judges of the Superior Courts of this State shall render judgment in all civil cases founded on contract, where there has been personal service, without the verdict of a jury, at the first term of the court to which the same may be returnable, where no issueable defense is filed on oath."

The above is a good bill, introduced by Mr. Longley, of Troup, which we hope to see pass, as a most meritorious measure.

The Public Printing.

We observe a statement that Estill was offered an equal share in the public printing by THE CONSTITUTION. This is altogether a mistake. THE CONSTITUTION never proposed anything that would not leave it a double share of the work.

Our simple statement of the facts showing how the Public Printer secured his election seems to have created a lively commotion, and to be strangely construed into an assault. All the leading papers, however, have either directly or virtually confessed the truth of our statement. We desire to make but two points, and we will restate them.

First, that it was a combination, and one ramifying every section of the State, that effected the election of the State Printer; this combination dividing the work between three parties, the News, Chronicle, and Advertizer, all others in the combination being paid or promised specified sums, which we named.

Secondly, that the profits were so dissipated that the office was worth little or nothing, as we showed the profits to be but little more than $3,000 per annum.

The last proposition we demonstrated unanswerably; the former stands confessed. We therefore dismiss the matter from our columns.

Poor Carlotta Dead.

The death of "Poor Carlotta" ends the most romantic and brilliant, and at the same time the saddest and most touching drama of modern days.

It is a curious and startling coincidence that the death of Carlotta follows almost immediately that of Napoleon, the author of her tragic woes. It seems Providential. She lived while he did, and the constant recordings of her melancholy madness reached him in his exile to embitter the downfall that really began its downward run with her own sad misfortune. He was hardly cold in his grave, and the fluttering echo of the world's babble at his decease beginning to quiet down, before the flashing herald of the swift telegraph announced that Carlotta, his unintended victim, had too obtained rest for her suffering soul in the arms of death.

Poor Carlotta! The world's sympathy lies in the phrase, and will sound down the ages while human sympathy has existence.

Beautiful, gifted, nobly-bred and apportioned, her morning of life was as lonely as earth ever knew. Married to the princely Maximilian, the noble scion of a royal house, fortune seems to have lavished her treasures on the happy pair.

Lured by the glittering bauble of sovereignty, held out by the scheming Napoleon, they went to the fatal land of the Montezumas, distracted and chaotic Mexico, he to a bitter death, and she to a more bitter madness.

The world has since rung with their sad tale. Murdered Maximilian and crazy Carlotta are the crystalized synopses of an historic tragedy that mankind will cherish as long as memory and sensibility survive.

Let Us be Thankful.

People will grumble about the weather, go where you will; be the climate the best or the worst, or betwixt and between, they are not content as a rule with the ways of Providence on the weather question. One would think that a Georgian who reads at breakfast the weather telegrams that come to us from the North this winter—that he, of all men, would be content with his climatal allowance. That an Atlantian should grumble about his streets is not surprising, but that is clearly man's doings, or rather misdoings, nor is it strange that we thought the air chilly during the late coal famine, but our own want of foresight and "spondulix" contributed to that temporary trouble.

Very few of us have a just idea of what 20 degrees below zero means—and the wind blowing as it did one day, at noon, in Milwaukie! Up in Maine they fairly run the mercury into the ground—as many degrees being required below the ciphar as commonly come into use above it. Perhaps they turned the peaky thing upside down.

Two feet of frost in the ground, and two feet of "beautiful snow" on top of it—and all this lasting far into the spring months! Have we not cause to be thankful? Consider the balmy open air of this blessed morning; go out into the garden and see the modest violets springing into new life. They are there in full blossom, we assure you. Old Probabilities does it is true, occasionally send us a fragment of his newly discovered cold waves, but he can't make them stay with us; they go right back whence they came.

No finer picture of Northern life and scenes has been written than may be found in the old Quaker's "Snow Bound." Pick it up this morning, and read how

"All day the heavy meteor fell;
And, when the second morning shone,
We looked upon a world unknown,
On nothing we could call our own.
Around the glistening wonder, bent
The blue walls of the firmament,
No cloud above, no earth below—
A universe of sky and snow!

Cotton—No. 22,

The receipts this week are 115,000 bales—22,000 more than last year, and 30,000 less than two years since. It is likely the receipts for next week will be about 125,000 bales, compared with 93,000 last year, and 161,000 the year before; and the receipts at the interior towns 23,000 bales, compared with 20,000 last year and 40,000 the year before.

The weather this week has been extremely cold and disagreeable. The thermometer has averaged 27 degrees at noon; two days clear and cold, one day cloudy and light rain all day, two days cloudy and cold, one day cloudy and light sleet all day, and one day clear and pleasant.

Two days this week the ground has been covered with a solid sheet of ice, making it quite dangerous to walk upon it, everything having the appearance of a beautiful waxed floor prepared for dancing, upon which it was dangerous to walk except to the sound of music.

The weather thus far has been the coldest, and longest continued period of weather in thirty years. But now the indications are there will be a favorable change. We expect this month to be warm and generally pleasant. We shall likely have more rain and but little snow or sleet. To our friends, the farmers, we will say you will have pleasant weather to prepare your farms for the next crop during this month.

The market in New York has been active and higher. The price having risen ¼ a cent with large sales, 17,000 bales, principally for export. The price for contracts rose during the week ¼ cent, but closed week with ¼ of a cent decline. Our readers will recollect that for three months past we have advised them to buy or hold their cotton; during which time the price has risen 2 cents a pound for spots, and the same for contracts, and those who accepted our advise and acted on it have made a plenty of money, provided they have not too much on hand at this time.

Last week we advised all to sell out, and those who done so have done well, as they may not find so many anxious buyers in some time to come. Some, we know, sold out clean; others, Shylock like, are still holding on hoping to get the pound of flesh.

The rise the past ten days we do not look upon as a natural one. It was started by some wealthy bull houses in New York, and the cold and bad weather this week has helped them very much, indeed, causing the receipts to fall off just at the right time for them. It may be egotism, but in the years we have lived, we find a man must blow his own horn, if it is ever blown. So we state our estimate of receipts at all ports, and imports into Liverpool, for this week were exactly correct. There is now 285,000 bales of American cotton afloat for Liverpool, of which 80,000 will be due and should be received at that port next week.

The cause of the very small receipts at New Orleans on the 29th and 30th, we do not attribute to exhaustion of the crop, but the very severe cold of the past two weeks has filled the rivers of the West with large floating islands of ice which has obstructed navigation very seriously, causing the boats to run slowly and make long trips. If this is true, the receipts at New Orleans may be 50,000 bales next week, compared with 25,000 last year the same week. The receipts this week at all ports except New Orleans are 77,000 bales, compared with 54,000 at the same ports last year, for the same time, this is 43 per cent. more, and the largest excess of any time in two months.

The Liverpool market has been firm with a rise of ⅛ of a cent, with moderate sales, spinners having taken this week 61,000 bales which is just about their consumption, the smaller receipts at our ports, the active market in New York, and a little more activity at Manchester caused by our smaller receipts has been the cause.

In future we will give the following tables at the end of each month in thousands of bales. The stocks of cotton in Liverpool and afloat for that port for five years are as follows:

	1869.	1870.	1871.	1872.	1873.
Stocks	457	346	578	469	454
Afloat	377	256	496	435	430

American cotton in sight for same time:

	1869.	1870.	1871.	1872.	1873.
Stocks interior ports	93	103	194	89	94
Stocks United States	265	395	617	525	560
Stocks Liverpool	85	155	253	147	209

Exports this week	16	44	63	22	85
	549	860	1504	1014	1130

Our own spinners have taken less the past month than they have for the same month in five years, except in 1870. We give the figures for past month and for five months for five years:

	1869.	1870.	1871.	1872.	1873.

Five months	374	321	390	408	495

Receipts at and shipments from Bombay for four years for the month of January,

Trade total	227	344	342	247
Actual export total	25	32	40	19
American trade	92	155	155	127
American export	6	8	10	10

The receipts at the interior towns for four years for the month of January, are as follows:

1870.	1871.	1872.	1873.
90,000	175,000	111,000	106,000

The total receipts at the ports for five months, for four years, are as follows:

1870	1871	1872	1873
1,199	2,333	1,913	2,289

The course of the market in New York for five years, including this year, is as follows, by which it will be seen the price has risen in December every year, except 1871—has risen every year in January, has fallen every year in February and March, except last year. R for rose, F for fell.

	1869	1870	1871	1872	1873
December	R ⅛ cts	R ⅛ cts	F ⅛ cts	R 1 cts	R ⅛ cts
January	R ⅛	R ⅛	F ⅛	R ⅛	F ⅛
February	F ⅛	F ⅛	R ⅛	F ⅛	R ⅛
March	R ⅛	F ⅛	F ⅛	F ⅛

As we are now at the end of five months, we will revise our estimate of receipts:

Receipts last year to this date were 1,916,000, which was 20 per cent. of the receipts at the ports.

This year the receipts have been 2,252,000 for same time. Taking the per cent. as a basis it makes this crop 3,468,000.

We suppose there has been 7½ per cent. of the crop received to this date—making the total crop 3,462,000. Our readers will see we have raised our estimate 50,000 bales. All old cotton dealers know that the months of February and March are most important, in estimating the crop, whether it will be large or small. Our space does not allow us to finish our monthly report, but will do so in our next.

For the future we believe the course of the market will be upward, for several months, but if we do not have lower prices and a dull market for a week or two to come, we shall be disappointed. If any of our friends wish to buy, we would advise them to wait until the market subsides a cent a pound.

GEORGIA WESTERN RAILROAD.

The committee on the Georgia Western Railroad submitted the following report, which was tabled by the following vote:

Yeas—Dodd, McLendon, Rice, Venable, Boring, Langston, McDaniel.

Nays—Brotherton, Morris, Beattie, Mcmillin, Sparks, Goldsmith, McMillan.

Mayor Hammock, yes.

Your special committee on the Georgia Western Railroad Company, beg leave to submit the following report:

We have conferred with Maj. Campbell Wallace, President of the Georgia Western Railroad, and have received the communication herewith, in which the present condition and future requirements of the road are set forth. It will be seen that since the reorganization of the company, eighteen thousand seven hundred dollars have been subscribed, besides the subscription of the city of Atlanta, which is three hundred thousand. Of this notable subscription some have paid the instalments called for, and others have not, eighteen hundred and fifty dollars only having been paid. Maj. Wallace estimates that $2,500,000, will complete and equip the road, therefore the present subscription will not hold it.

Grant, Alexander & Co., have a contract for $2,000, which they will take in stock of the road.

The salaries of officers, per annum are $12,000.

Your committee feel the grave responsibility they are to meet in this momentous question, but are determined to do, what they conceive to be their wholesome duty in the premises, and while in connection with all the citizens of Atlanta, we earnestly desire to see the Georgia Western Railroad a success, yet we with much regret state that to our judgment, without outside aid the city cannot build the road. Maj. Wallace says "Atlanta would have to subscribe one million dollars," "and any petty subscription of three or five hundred thousand dollars, will be just so much thrown away, for where has always been to take enough stock to secure and control the road or take none at all." While your committee would not undermine the great advantages that would accrue to Atlanta from an abundance of cheap coal and iron and prospective manufactories, yet we feel that the increase of taxes heaped upon already burdened people would be more than we would be willing to sanction. And besides this the bonded debt of Atlanta is quite heavy already, and we are paying annually about one hundred thousand dollars; believe, we therefore that the to issue an additional million dollars in bonds would be doing the market that they would only bring a nominal price or be driven out altogether. The city's subscription is $300,000, and if the construction of the ordinance is to pay currency for stock of the road, then it will take $600,000 in bonds, at least, to make the payment; and these $600,000 in bonds and interest at 8 per cent. will amount, at maturity, to $1,104,000, and should we subscribe the additional $700,000 which is asked for, it will take $2,040,000 in bonds, which would make a grand total of bonds and interest at the expiration of thirty years of $4,080,000, for which we would hold $700,000 of the scrip of the road.

We are reluctant to give up the Georgia Western Railroad, but with the above facts staring us in the face, and the probability that even after having made the subscription that the road would not be completed, we with great regret must submit, if the only alternative is to subscribe one million dollars to the road. We therefore recommend that no further subscription be made to the road.

J H Goldsmith, W H Brotherton,
P A Beattie, J C McWilliam,
J H Mcmillin.

The following letter from Major Campbell Wallace was read by the committee:

GEORGIA WESTERN RAILROAD OFFICE, January 31, 1873.

J. H. Goldsmith, Chairman:

DEAR SIR—In compliance with the resolution of the City Council, I herewith hand you a list (marked "A") of subscribers to the stock of the Georgia Western Railroad made since the reorganization of the company. The amount subscribed is eighteen thousand and seven hundred dollars, on which eighteen hundred and fifty dollars have been paid. The list shows who have paid and who have not paid. In addition to this list, the shares to be taken by Grant, Alexander & Co., under their contract, will amount to forty thousand dollars, upon which seven hundred and fifty have been paid. You will observe that no payment is marked opposite the name of Thomas Alexander, but the Company has in its hands at all times funds due Thomas Alexander more than equal to the amount due on his stock, which can at any moment be applied to the payment of the same.

There is in this office an old list made before the war, upon which some of the subscribers have paid one dollar per share, which amount was expended in surveys made prior to the reorganization of the company. I herewith hand a list (marked "B") of the names of such persons as paid the one per cent. call. For some cause this list has not been considered binding, and, while a few have removed their subscriptions, others have failed either to renew or to recognize their obligation to pay.

The city subscription, as you are aware, is three hundred thousand dollars. On this two calls of ten per cent. each have been paid, and by the dissolution of ex-Mayor James credited on the books of the company to the city. In addition we have received from Planters' Bank, on the check of the company, at different times, to pay estimates, cash, amounting to forty-one thousand seven hundred and forty-eight dollars and eighty-two cents, which stand charged to the railroad company at said bank.

Some stock has been taken at several points along and near the line of the road on various conditions. One man subscribes and agrees to pay if the road is located in one way; another subscribes on condition it goes another way, and a third in another, and so on—all requiring their money to be spent in the county in which they reside. Subscriptions of this class have never done much towards building railroads.

I have no reasons whatever to change the estimates so carefully made up by the engineers after actual survey, and which were submitted in January last to the citizens of Atlanta at the rooms of the Board of Trade, except an additional cost in consequence of the advance in the price of rails. The estimate for the entire line and equipment was $2,250,000, to which I won d add $250,000 to cover this advance in rails, but, at the same time, I am confident a reduction in the price of iron will occur.

I need not answer that the present subscription will not build the road, and I will add that my opinion, always given without reserve to any and all, both is that Atlanta would have to subscribe one million dollars, is unchanged. That will secure the road beyond contingency, and our party subscription of three or five hundred thousand dollars will be just so much thrown away.

My advice has always been to take enough stock to secure and control the road, or take none at all.

The Georgia Western Railroad has in its employ as salaried officers:

One President at five thousand dollars per annum
One Secretary, Treasurer and Book-Keeper at eighteen hundred dollars,
One Engineer-in-Chief at thirty six hundred dollars,
And one Assistant Engineer at twenty-four hundred dollars.

Allow me to add, that being a citizen of Atlanta, identified in everything pertaining to her welfare, part and parcel of no ring, either railroad or manufacturing, water-works or banking, owning stock in banks and railroads, yet free from all under currents or side speculations, I feel that my judgment in this matter of the Georgia Western Railroad is unbiased by any interest or consideration, save the which is common with all the citizens of Atlanta. The further growth and prosperity of this city depends on the fostering and extension of her wholesale business, and the manufacture of any and everything that can be made profitably from wood, cotton or iron.

All success in manufacturing, the world over, is based on an abundant water-power, or a never failing nor fluctuating supply of cheap fuel. Atlanta cannot hope for the former, while the latter is cheaply and perfectly within her control.

The Georgia Western Railroad, when built, can deliver coal in Atlanta at less than fifteen cents per bushel, and at that rate, with her other resources, she can pay dividends on all her stock, and interest on all her bonds. I put this on record, willing to abide the result that time will bring on the wisdom of my calculation.

Morever, in my judgment, Atlanta without cheap coal to sustain manufactures is to-day a finished city. She is without legitimate competition from any quarter of the globe, in the transportation of the essentials to build up faster and sustain a thrifty population and a growing city.

Very respectfully your obedient servant,

CAMPBELL WALLACE,
President (G. W. R. R. Company.

Alderman Rice moved that the special committee on the Georgia Western Railroad be discharged from the further consideration of the subject, which prevailed.

Whereas, the trustees of Oglethorpe College did, on the 25th of March, 1870, petition the Mayor and Council for a donation to enable said trustees to build a college building in or near said city, not to cost less than $50,000 or $60,000, exhibiting at the same time a subscription list amounting to $40,000 or more to induce said Mayor and Council to subscribe, said trustees promising that all the money realized on said list and the amount subscribed by the city should be expended in building and ornamenting a first class college building; and whereas, on the 8th day of April, 1870, said Mayor and Council did subscribe the sum of $10,000 to assist in erecting said college building, which amount has been paid to said trustees; and whereas, said trustees, after soon ing said $10,000 failed to erect said college building, but purchased a house and lot on the corner of Washington and Mitchell streets, with said money, said house being wholly unsuited to the purpose of a first-class college, and whereas the signers to the subscription exhibited refused to pay the sums subscribed in consequence of the failure of said trustees to build a first-class college as promised and buying the house and lot aforesaid.

Be it resolved, that His Honor the Mayor, appoint a committee of three to confer with the trustees of Oglethorpe College and urge in consideration of all the aforementioned failures the return to the city of said $12,000.

His Honor appointed as said committee, Aldermen Rice, Dodd, and Mcmallin.

By Alderman McDuffie:

THE DAILY CONSTITUTION

THE MEETING PLACE.

Where the faded flower shall freshen,
Freshen never more to fade;
Where the shaded sky shall brighten,
Brighten never more to shade;
Where the sun-blaze never scorches;
Where the storm shall never lower;
Where the star-beams cease to chill;
Where no tempest signs the echoes
Of the wood, or wave, or hill;
Where the morn shall wake in gladness,
And the heart of joy possess;
Where the daylight dies in fragrance,
'Mid the burst of holy song:
Brother, we shall meet and rest,
'Mid the holy and the blest!

Where no shadow shall bewilder,
Where life's vain parade is o'er;
Where the sleep of sin is broken,
And the dreamer dreams no more;
Partings, claspings, sob, and moan,
Midnight waking, twilight weeping,
Heavy noon-tide—all are done;
Where the child has found its mother,
Where the mother finds her child;
Where dear families are gathered
That were scattered on the wild:
Brother, we shall meet and rest,
'Mid the holy and the blest!

Where the hidden wound is healed,
Where the blighted life re-blooms;
Where the smitten heart the freshness
Of its buoyant youth resumes;
Where the love that here we lavish
On the withering leaves of time,
Shall have fadeless flowers to fix on,
In an ever spring-bright clime;
Where we find the joy of loving
As we never loved before,
Loving on, unchilled, unhindered,
Loving once, and evermore:
Brother, we shall meet and rest,
'Mid the holy and the blest!

Where a blasted world shall hri, hten
Under-neath a purer sphere,
And a softer, gentler sunshine
Shed its mellow splendor here;
Where earth's barren vales shall blossom,
Putting on their robe of green,
And a purer, fairer Eden
Be where only wastes have been;
Where a King in kingly glory,
Such as earth hath never known,
Shall assume the righteous sceptre,
Claim and wear the holy crown:
Brother, we shall meet and rest,
'Mid the holy and the blest!

Madison as a Temperance Man.

Many years ago, when the temperance movement began in Virginia, ex-President Madison lent the weight of his influence to the cause. Case-bottles and decanters disappeared from the side-board at Montpelier—wine was no longer dispensed to the many visitors at that hospitable mansion. Nor was this all. Harvest began, but the customary barrel of whisky was not purchased, and the song of scythemen in the wheat-field languished. In lieu of whisky there was a beverage most innocuous, unstimulating, and unpalatable to the army of dusky laborers.

The following morning Mr. Madison called in his headman to make the usual inquiry—"Nelson, how comes on the crop?"

"Po'ly, Mars' Jeems—monsus po'ly."

"Why, what's the matter?"

"Things is seyus."

"What do you mean by serious?"

"We gwine los' dat crap."

"Lose the crop! Why should we lose it?"

"'Cause dat ar crap ar hesp too big a crap to be gethered 'thout whisky. Lasses and water nuver gethered no crap sence de worl' war' made ner 'taint gwine to."

Mr. Madison succumbed, the whisky was procured, the "crap" was gathered, case-bottles and decanters reappeared, and the ancient order was restored at Montpelier, never again to be disturbed.—From Lippincott's Magazine.

EDITIONS OF THE BIBLE.—The following table, showing the time, manner, and authorship of the various translations of the sacred volumes into English, will interest most readers. Such a table might very well be cut out and pasted in each copy of the Bible. Indeed, it might be embodied in the preface of all the editions when printed hereafter:

A. D.	TRANSLATIONS.

721	Bebert's Four Gospels.

1539	Cranmer's Great Bible.
1539	Taverner's Bible.

Figures.

The aggregate consumption of iron in the United States was about 3,000,000 tons, of which 1,064,946 tons were exported from the British Isles.

About 7,000 acres are cleared of timber each week day in this country. Of the annual crop $75,000,000 worth goes to fuel, and twice as much to fencing. The locomotives in country consume no less than 702,000,000 cords a year, or 500 acres a day.

☞ It is related that Charles Sumner, a short time since, referred in the Senate to the First Napoleon as the "reputed uncle of the Emperor." He was Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, and fearing, on reflection, that the expression would appear improper, coming from such a source, he sent an autograph note to the reporter of the Associated Press, after the debate was concluded, requesting him to suppress the word "reputed." The reporter complied, but kept the note as a possible curiosity of the future.

DATES OF THE AMERICAN WARS.—King Phillip's War, 1675; King William's War, 1689; Dutch War, 1673; Queen Ann's War, 1744; the French and Indian War, 1756; The American Revolution, 1776; Indian War, 1790; The Barbary War, 1800; Tecumseh War, 1804; British War, 1812; Algerine War, 1815; First Seminole War, 1817; Second Seminole war, 1835; Mexican War, 1846.
